Bronstein, Zilberberg, Chueiri e Potenza Advogados advised IBBX, a company that has developed a technology capable of capturing energy lost in the air, in an investment round to fund the scaling of its commercial efforts, with a focus on Industry 4.0.

The investment, worth $3 million, came from Indicator Capital.

IBBX still hopes to raise another $2 million and is in advanced talks with some funds. IBBX was founded two years ago by Luiz Fernando Destro, a physics enthusiast who dropped out of college to work in an industrial company.
