Clifford Chance has announced the promotion of 32 new partners globally, including five new partners in the Americas, among them Mariana Estévez (pictured), who specialises in Latin American finance and capital markets, effective 1 May.

The other lawyers promoted in the Americas were Rebecca O'Brien (Global Financial Markets, New York), Rebecca Pereira (Tax, New York), John-Patrick Powers (Litigation & Dispute Resolution, Washington, DC), and Matthew Warner (Corporate, New York).

Mariana joined the firm in 2015, focusing her practice on hybrid financings and debt capital markets transactions in Latin America.

Her experience includes representing domestic and international financial institutions applying innovative structures, such as securitisations and bank bond structures, to finance energy and infrastructure projects throughout Latin America. She also has extensive experience representing issuers and financial institutions acting as initial purchasers or placement agents in high yield and investment grade debt offerings and liability management transactions by corporates, sovereigns and sub-sovereigns in Latin America.
