

GREENBERG TRAURIG INSTRUCTED ON SIX SENSES RESORT PROJECT IN BRAZIL

Posted on 7 December 2017

Category: News

Greenberg Traurig acted the developer of the Six Senses Formosa Bay Resort planned for Rio Grande Do Norte, Brazil.

Six Senses is a luxury wellness resort chain with roots in South East Asia. The developer is an entity owned by international businessman Greg Hajdarowicz and it owns the seven kilometre coastline where the resort will be built. According to the developer, the resort, which includes 185 villas, will be one of Six Senses's first projects in Latin America.

Greenberg Traurig's team was led by partner Nelson F. Migdal who co-chairs the firm's global hospitality practice group.

Greenberg Traurig worked on this deal as international hospitality counsel in cooperation with Brazilian law firm Koury Lopes Advogados.